

My Journey is to find a positive

St George and Sutherland Shire Leader, Thursday 16, 2009

Thank you for the opportunity to respond to the many positive and some negative comments made regarding the Leader article covering my personal journey with one of those involved in my son Michael Marslew's murder in 1994.

Since Michel's murder, I have been outspoken about many issues related to victims of crime, violence, antisocial behaviour and road trauma.

This led to the formation of the Enough is Enough Anti Violence Movement - for support and counselling of victims of the aforementioned crimes and more- the concept being to encourage victims to take back their lives following traumatic incidents.

Some people choose not to move on and become bitter, others take a different path and find a way to deal with what has happened -even to the point of trying to make something positive happen as a result of that incident.

My intention was not to hurt anyone, quite the opposite - we are all entitled to our opinion and I, like others, have now expressed mine, both in words and actions. What I have done may not suit others - this is my journey.

Part of the work of Enough is Enough is also to encourage personal responsibility. This has led to us running programs in schools, juvenile correctional centres, prisons and court directed traffic offender programs.

My journey is to find a positive

Thank you for the opportunity to respond to the many positive and some negative comments made regarding the Leader article covering my personal journey with one of those involved in my son Michael Marslew's murder in 1994.

Since Michael's murder, I have been outspoken about many issues related to victims of crime, violence, antisocial behaviour and road trauma.

This led to the formation of the Enough is Enough Anti Violence Movement – for support and counselling of victims of the aforementioned crimes and more – the concept being to encourage victims to take back their lives following traumatic incidents.

Some people choose not to move on and become bitter, others take a different path and find a way to deal with what has happened – even to the point of trying to make something positive happen as a result of that incident.

My intention was not to hurt anyone, quite the opposite – we are all entitled to our opinion and I, like others, have now expressed mine, both in words and actions. What I have done may not suit others – this is my journey.

Part of the work of Enough is Enough is also to encourage personal responsibility. This has led to us running programs in schools, juvenile correctional centres, prisons and court directed traffic offender programs.

Ken Marslew, CEO
Enough is Enough (www.enoughisenough.org.au)

Ken Marslew, CEO
Enough is Enough (www.enoughisenough.org.au)